UNIVERSITY OF YORK FORUM TEACHING FELLOWSHIPS 2005

To recognise and reward teaching, the University annually awards a small number of Teaching Fellowships worth £7,000-£9,000, in support of a project to enhance teaching. Fellowship holders not only need to have a 'bright idea' for a teaching enhancement project, but must demonstrate a track record of excellent teaching, inspiring learners and colleagues and adopting a reflective approach to their teaching.

Fellowships have been awarded this year to:

Dr Claudia Haake (History), for a project to develop a web-based resource for teaching Mexican History.

Mr John Mateer (Electronics), for a project to design and build a portable display system for teaching technical and aesthetic critical viewing skills on the Media Technology programme.

Mr Philip Warwick (Management Studies), for a project to gather good practice from the UK and abroad in the teaching and support of international students.

NATIONAL TEACHING FELLOWSHIP SCHEME 2005

The National Teaching Fellowship Scheme is part of a nationwide, government-funded scheme to promote excellence in learning and teaching. Operated by the national Higher Education Academy, this prestigious competition recognises individuals who are outstanding as teachers and promoters of learning through a £50 000 award to be used for a teaching project.

National Teaching Fellowships have been awarded to two members of York staff this year:

Dr John Issitt (Educational Studies). John Issitt is commended for his emphasis on collaboration, which makes him stand out as an innovative and inspirational teacher and colleague, and for his understanding of the intimate connection between learning and teaching, which makes him such a tremendous asset to his department, the University and the wider community.

Dr Robert Partridge (Careers Service). Robert Partridge is commended for his outstanding contribution to the area of employability and skills, focused on holistic learning via extra-curricular activities which are academically rigorous. His pioneering work includes development of the University's York Award and of volunteering opportunities for local staff and students within higher and further education through the Millennium Volunteers and Active York schemes.

YORK AWARD

The York Award is a programme of personal and skill development offered by the University of York in partnership with leading public, private and voluntary sector organisations. The York Award certificate is awarded alongside the degree to those who have completed the programme and in so doing have developed an analytical and reflective approach to learning, as well as competence in a broad range of skills.
