

The internet and the 2005 General Election: political awareness, participation and trust

A meeting to discuss whether the internet can enhance public engagement with the political process.

Wednesday 18 April 2007, 6.30-8pm, House of Commons

Does the use of the internet by politicians and parties increase public trust? Has the internet increased public participation in politics? How has the internet affected election campaigning? Does the internet change public awareness of politics and elections?

Speakers include:

Professor John Curtice, University of Strathclyde
Derek Wyatt MP (TBC), Chair, All-Party Internet Group
Professor Rachel Gibson (TBC), University of Leicester

To register for this event please email hans_admin@hansard.lse.ac.uk