It is time to (re) Discover Society. We are living in challenging times and need, more than ever, to understand what is happening and how it affects us.

Discover Society is a new (free) online monthly magazine to bring current social research, policy analysis and commentary to a wide audience. There has been a lamentable absence of social research based evidence at the heart of much recent public debate and this magazine aims to redress the balance.

Discover Society aims to repopulate the space left by the magazine ‘New Society’ (1962-1988), but for the 21st century digital age. Lively and engaging it is somewhere between a journal and a blog.

Discover Society publishes short (1500 word) research-based articles which are also available to print. We also publish: ‘Viewpoints’ on current social issues; ‘Policy Briefings’; accounts from ‘On the Frontline’ of society and each issue will a have longer ‘Focus’ piece. Articles will be written by leading academics and key researchers in each field and will enable wider dialogue between research, policy, practice and everyday life.

Discover Society is published by ‘Social Research Publishing’ a not for profit company.
ISSUE ONE: October 2013

Focus:
Emma Uprichard  Big Data, Little Questions?

Articles:
Mike Savage  Revisiting New Society
Jacqui Gabb and Janet Fink  Enduring Love? Couple Relationships in the 21st Century
Peter Taylor-Gooby  The Wrong Way to Tackle Poverty
Alice Mah  Living with Industrial Ruination
James Nazroo  Why Ethnic Inequalities Continue to Matter
Sam Friedman  'Working' for your Laughter: The Rise of the British Comedy Snob
Suzanne Hall  Multilingual Citizenship
Alan Warde  Sustainable Consumption and Behaviour Change

Viewpoint:
Gurinder K. Bhambra  The Dangerous Politics of Belonging

On the Frontline:
Lisa McKenzie  Passing By: Insecure Neighbourhoods

Policy Briefing:
Karen Rowlingson  Where Now for Financial Inclusion?
and Steve McKay

Managing Editors: John Holmwood (University of Nottingham) and Sue Scott (University of York)
Editorial Board: Kehinde Andrews (Newman University); Lorenza Antonucci (University of West of Scotland); Les Back (Goldsmiths); Ben Baumberg (University of Kent); Gurinder K. Bhambra (University of Warwick); Mark Carrigan (University of Warwick); Emma Uprichard (University of Warwick); David Mellor (University of Oxford); Katherine Smith (University of Edinburgh).

Twitter: @discoversoc  https://twitter.com/DiscoverSoc
Facebook: https://www.facebook.com/discoverersociety
Email: discoversociety@outlook.com

Published by Social Research Publishing (a not-for-profit company limited by guarantee)