INTRODUCTION

The Womersley Collection is a compilation of financial papers of both the Estate organisation and of the former occupants of Womersley Park and Estate. The Womersley Estate was situated some four miles from Pontefract and although comparatively little has been written about the Womersley Estate, some further details can be gleaned from the brochure produced to advertise the Estate's sale by auction in 1930. At this point, Womersley was made up of the Hall and Park, 25 farms, 8 smallholdings, 56 cottages and two quarries. In total, the Estate was described as 'embracing the entire village of Womersley, the whole covering an area of about 4,688 acres'.

The Womersley Estate is further described as 'one of Yorkshire's most picturesque properties', and is (somewhat tenuously) linked back to the establishment of Pontefract Castle by Ilbert de Lacy in 1080. What is known, however, is that at some point in the mid 18th century the Estate came into the possession of the Hawke family (and it is implied that the famous Admiral Edward Hawke may have been a resident) and that with the marriage of Cassandra Harvey-Hawke to the 4th Earl of Rosse in 1870 the Estate passed into the hands of the Rosse family of Birr, Ireland. The house itself is described in 1930 as being Georgian with extensive gardens and parkland 'enjoying a picturesque unsullied rural situation' which should 'appeal strongly to those in search of a typical Country Home'.

At this point, accounts in the collection show that the Estate comprised of the Hall, the Gardens and Woods (with an account for the upkeep of Game) and other buildings, including the Farm and Estate Brickworks (described as 'not at present in working' in the 1930 catalogue). In common with many other large family Estates, the impact of the First World War and the change in working life (combined with the general increase in financial pressures that hit all wealthy families in the depression) meant that by 1930, the Estate was placed for sale at a general auction in July of the same year. The outcome of the auction is not recorded but records for the Estate continue until the mid 1940's.

The papers themselves cover a wide range of topics, illustrated through the accounts of the Estate and its constituent parts. As well as top-level Estate records recording the general activities of the Estate, there are also more detailed records of a much more personal nature, illustrating everything from the contents of an 18th century granary to the leisure spending of an early 20th century socialite. The documents relating to the sale of the Estate in 1930 also give a hugely detailed appraisal of the Womersley area including building sizes (and in isolated cases, contents) and location; as well as providing several detailed maps of the Estate. The Farm records illustrate well the demands of running a large farm organisation, whilst the Hall records give an intriguing insight to the purchasing habits and the lifestyle of the Hawke family in the late 18th century, whilst the records of an unknown 17th century merchant provide a fascinating insight into the trading culture of the time. Overall, the Womersley Estate papers provide a glimpse into both the general – and very specific – life of a large Estate.

THE ARCHIVES

The Womersley Collection was purchased at auction in May 2005, thanks to generous donation from the Raymond Burton Charitable Trust. The collection is no way a complete survey of the activities of the Womersley Estate, but it does give a distinct flavour of Estate life in certain periods. The papers themselves are overwhelmingly financial in nature and document large scale financial activities of the entire estate to the smaller accounts of the Brickworks and Farm. There are however, many papers where it was impossible to accurately identify the creator. Although every effort has been made to distinguish the author, in many cases this has not been possible. A small collection of documents realting to the Womersley area can be found in the Yarbrugh Muniments collection at the Borthwick Institute (Ref. Y/MD WOM).

The collections at the Borthwick Institute are by no means the only Archives relating to the Womersley Estate. Other collections relating to the Hawke and Rosse family, as well as other Estate material can be found at the following Archives:

Birr Castle Demesne
Birr
County Offaly
Republic Of Ireland

Birr Castle is the seat of the Rosse family, and so contains much information relating to the Estate for the period following the marriage of Cassandra Harvey-Hawke to the 4th Earl of Rosse in 1870.

West Yorkshire Archives (Wakefield)
Registry of Deeds
Newstead Road
Wakefield
WF1 2DE

West Yorkshire Archives (Wakefield) holds papers relating to the Rosse Estate for the period covering 1887-1908.
