

Cause Papers in the Diocesan Courts of the Archbishopric of York, 1300–1858

Editing and Standardisation in the Cause Papers Database

The Cause Papers project provided an on-line searchable catalogue of more than 13,000 cause papers relating to cases heard between 1300 and 1858 in the Church Courts of the diocese of York, the original records for which are held at the Borthwick Institute for Archives at the University of York. The project aimed to pioneer a new standard of excellence in data accuracy and standardization. Cataloguing such a large and varied number of records posed numerous challenges in these areas, including the problem of how to incorporate spelling and language variations of surname and place names.

The following document provides information on the methods used by the project team in compiling, editing and standardizing the data. It is split into the following sections:-

- 1) Information provided by the database
- 2) List of standard reference works used by the project team
- 3) List of types and sub-types of cases commonly used in the database
- 4) Standardization of Forenames
- 5) Standardization of Surnames – Part A
- 6) Standardization of Surnames – Part B
- 7) Problematic Place-names – Identification and Standardization

Please note that this text is not intended as a guide to on-line catalogue. Users requiring assistance with searching the catalogue should consult the on-screen help text.

Editing and standardisation for the Cause Paper Database

1) Information provided by the database

Owing to the volume and complexity of manuscript material involved, it was not possible to provide full transcriptions of the cause papers. Instead, the following data is included:

General background information:

- court type
- brief details of the type of case;
- the start and end date of the case;
- details of which types of documents are included (eg. libel, deposition, sentences)
- the number of documents in each case
- case outcome

Information about participants

- names of all participants in the case (not only plaintiffs and defendants, but also witnesses, proctors, etc), including all the variant spellings of each surname, together with a standardized, modern version of the surname to facilitate searching.
- Role in the case
- Locations associated with them, including place of residence
- Age
- Occupation
- Status

Information about locations:

- all locations listed in the document, including the places of residence for all the participants (if known), with all the variant spellings, linked to a standardized, modern version of the place-name.

This document takes each of these data types in turn and provides details of the decisions made about how to enter this information in a standard form, to ensure that the database was easily searchable.

Court type

The details of the type of court the case was heard in are given in the following standard forms:

- undefined
- Chancery
- Consistory
- High Commission
- Curia Ebor
- Dean and Chapter
- Exchequer
- Prerogative
- Peculiar

Type of case

In each instance, a 'generic case type' was selected from the following options:

- Undefined
- Annulment
- Appeals
- Benefice cases
- Breach of faith
- Defamation

- Immorality
- Matrimonial
- Pew dispute
- Separation
- Testamentary
- Tithe
- Violation of Church Rights

In addition, a ‘specific type’ was given in most cases and a list kept by the research team. This list, created in Excel, is provided as section 3 of this document and identifies the most commonly used specific types. The exception is Tithe cases, in which the ‘specific type’ field was used to indicate the crops and livestock mentioned in the cause.

Dates

Where the start and end dates of the case were unambiguous, a ‘certain date’ field was selected and the information was entered in this format: day/month/year (e.g. 26/06/1678). In some cases, it was possible only to attribute the case to a month or year, in which case the date would appear thus: 06/1678 or simply 1678. Many cases, however, had some level of ambiguity about the dating, so an ‘uncertain date’ field was selected and recorded in the same format. Whilst it was not practical to maintain this distinction on the website, records listing a definite day or month indicate a ‘certain’ date.

For the purposes of dating the documents, all members of the project team used the standard reference work: C. R. Cheney, ed., A Handbook of Dates for Students of British History, rev. M. Jones (2nd edn. Cambridge, 2000). For causes in which no date could be found, the team sometimes left the date field blank, but more commonly estimated a century and put the start and end dates as the beginning and end of that period.

Note also that the project team recorded the dates as they appeared in the cause papers. This means that up until 1752 (when the current, standard, Gregorian calendar was adopted) the dates reflect the historic use of the Julian calendar, in which the year starts in March - thus 01/1690 follows 12/1690, not 12/1689.

Extant Documents

The database states whether or not the following types of document are included in the case: deposition(s), libel(s) and sentence(s). The number of pieces (separate documents) of manuscript was also recorded. Depositions generally refer to witness statements. Technically, libels are the charges drawn up by the plaintiff; however, in some instances a record may indicate that it has a libel if the documents include a counter-allegation by the defendant. The sentence gives an indication of which party (if any) won the case and who was charged costs. It does not provide the judge's thoughts on the cause.

Case outcome

In the vast majority of cases, this simply states whether the plaintiff or defendant won or lost, occasionally with information about the award of costs and whether the judge's decision was appealed against. The cause papers do not usually provide an insight into the sanctions imposed on participants, however.

Locations

All locations are listed in the document, including the places of residence for all the participants, with all the variant spellings, linked to a standardized, modern version of the place-name. Where possible the researchers included a description of the place type, which was selected from the following options:

- undefined
- archdeaconry
- borough
- boundaries

- chapelry
- city
- civil parish
- common/fell
- country
- diocese
- division
- ecclesiastical parish
- ecclesiastical province
- fieldname
- forest
- habitation
- hamlet
- hundred
- grange
- liberty
- manor
- mill
- prebend
- region/district
- religious house
- rural deanery
- site
- street name
- tithing region
- town
- township
- urban area
- vernacular region
- vernacular site
- ville

- wapentake
- waterways
- woodland

The modern form of the place-name was derived thus:

1. Place-names were always translated from the Latin, regardless of date.
2. In the vast majority of cases, the modern forms of place-names are found within the English Placename Society series, as the Yorkshire and Nottinghamshire volumes are particularly fulsome. On occasion, it has been necessary to use other sources, notably the Victoria County History volumes and reliable internet resources. All places smaller than a parish in the database are linked to the relevant parish, city, town or county, to make searching easier.
3. In order to determine when certain areas became designated as parishes, this reference work has been used: F. A. Youngs, Guide to the Local Administrative Units of England (2 vols. London, 1991). If it was not clear which parish was meant, the ancient parish designated by Youngs, Guide, was chosen and a brief note made in the 'additional notes' box.
4. In some cases, a place has been split across two or more parishes. In these cases, one has been chosen and a list has been kept. This list forms section 7 of this document.
5. Religious houses were identified using D. Knowles and R. N. Hadcock, Medieval Religious Houses: England and Wales (London, New York & Toronto, 1953) and the Victoria County History series. The modern version was always entered in this form: 'Abbey of St Mary', 'Priory of Lewes'.
6. Fieldnames cannot always be identified, but often have recognizable forms, e.g. 'Suthfeld' or 'Bushopfeld'. In such cases, a suitable modern version has been provided.
7. In cases where a place-name cannot be identified, the first variant is taken as the standard form.

Information about participants

Where possible, given names were provided in English, in a standard form, using the following reference work: C.T. Martin, 'A Few Latin Christian Names With Their English Equivalents' in The Record Interpreter (2nd edn. Sussex, 1910), pp. 451-464. Some Christian names appeared in the manuscripts which were not included in this work. A short separate list was kept of the standard forms relating to such names used during the project, which is available in section 4 of this document.

Sometimes a participant was a corporate body, such as 'dean and chapter' or 'prior and monks'. In such cases, 'dean and chapter of x' was recorded in the given name box, in modern English. In some cases, as an individual dean/prior is also listed, in which case he appears as a separate entry.

Surname standardization was more complex. All the variant spellings used in the manuscript were included and can be searched. In addition, a standardized modern spelling of the surname was added, using the following system:

1. Language/translation of names. Prior to 1734, the Church records were kept in Latin (although some parts of them were written in English depending on date). Therefore, before 1734, all Latin surnames were translated to give a modern English version. In this context, it is worth noting that 'Relicta' has been translated as 'Widow'. From 1734, surnames were not translated, but simply modernized where appropriate. On the rare occasions where a surname appears in a language other than Latin or English, it has not been given a standard version.
2. In cases where a surname contains 'de' or 'of' as a prefix, this was only included in the modern version if it appears in the reference works detailed below.
3. The English versions of surnames were searched in P. H. Reaney & R. M. Wilson, A Dictionary of British Surnames (2nd edn. London, Henley & Boston, 1976 and 3rd edn., London, Routledge, 1991). The first form of the surname listed was given. For example, when the surname 'Warde' is searched, the name is - given in the Dictionary as ‘Ward, Warde, Wards’. The first, ‘Ward’, is given as the standard, modern version. If a letter appears in brackets in the entry, e.g. Keightl(e)y, it has been included.

4. In some cases, a surname is listed in its own right in Reaney and Wilson, but is actually a version of another surname. For example, ‘Mannering’ is listed as a version of ‘Mainwaring’. In these cases, the main stem (‘Mainwaring’) is taken as the modern, standard version. A list of such decisions was kept by the project staff. A version is available as section 5 of this document. Although reasonably comprehensive, this list is not exhaustive.
  5. In the case of peers, it has frequently proved necessary to use a number of reference works, including the online version of the Oxford Dictionary of National Biography and The Complete Peerage.
  6. In cases where the surname was not listed in the dictionary, if the surname is clearly based on a place-name, then the modern version of that place-name was used. Standard reference works for place-names are listed in detail later in this document, but usually publications by the English Placename Society were used. Otherwise, an internet search was carried out for single surname societies and a list made of these names. A list is available as section 6 of this document – again it should be noted that whilst a reasonable guide this list does not indicate all the surnames encountered during the project.
  7. In some cases, it was not possible to find any standard form, in which case the first variant was given as the ‘modern’ version.

Role in the case

This was listed according to the following standard forms:

- undefined
- appellant
- appellate
- executor

- defence proctor
- defendant
- guardian
- intervening parties
- plaintiff
- promoting parties
- testator
- witness

Locations associated with participants, including place of residence

Age

Where the manuscript gave this information, this was recorded in figures. A note was made in the ‘additional material’ section if there was any dispute or uncertainty noted in the case. Sometimes two ages are given, in which case they are separated by a slash ‘/’. Note that the ages given are approximate and do not necessarily bear an exact correlation with the dates of the case. This is owing to a variety of factors. Ages may have been taken from a document from a given year, yet the case span a number of years. The documents may list an approximation of age (perhaps because the participant was unsure what their age was). In addition, for some events associated with matters which might come before the courts it was necessary to be 21 years of age (for instance, to marry without parental consent). Parties might be recorded as being 21 in the documents (and thus in the database), but this may have merely indicated that they were 21 and over.

Occupation

These were given in standard form as far as possible, using the standard reference work C. Waters, A Dictionary of Old Trades, Titles and Occupations (2nd edn. Newbury, 2002). If necessary, a brief description of the role was included either here or in the 'additional material' section. As town officials like mayors and sheriffs were often paid, these roles have been included in both the occupation and status fields.

Status

A wide-ranging category, which includes the following:

- Obvious designations of noble/gentle status included in the manuscript, such as 'gentleman', 'esquire', 'knight', etc.
- Details of a participant's marital status
- All other family relationships mentioned in the document, especially when this related to other participants in the case.
- Unpaid posts which would have brought the bearer status, such as a role as a church or chapel warden or a civic official;
- Statements of extreme poverty sometimes included in court cases (e.g. 'pauper' or 'beggar').
- Statements of mental or physical health (e.g. 'lunatic' or 'infirm')
- Office-holders in the church are listed as 'clerk', with additional information given in the cases of those holding higher office (e.g. deacon, bishop or archbishop).
- Imprecise reference to age (e.g. 'junior', 'senior', 'infant', 'the younger')
- Statements about a person's legal status (e.g. 'minor', 'ward of court')

York, Holy Trinity (Micklegate)	'St. Trinities in mango vico, York'	N/A
Sherburn (in cases pre-1500)		Ganton, Yorkshire, East Riding	Sherburn was not a parish in its own right in the medieval period.
Sutton Bonington St Ann	Sutton Bonnington	Nottinghamshire	This is the default parish, as there are various parishes of the name 'Sutton Bonington', which are not always easy to identify.
East Leake	Leake	Nottinghamshire	There are two Nottinghamshire ancient parishes which are easily confused – East Leake and West Leake. In cases of doubt, East Leake has been used as the default parish. It should be noted, however, that there is also a Yorkshire, North Riding parish and township of Leake, which can cause confusion.
Beverley, St John	Beverley (when described as a parish)	Yorkshire, East Riding	There are various ancient parishes within Beverley, which are not always clearly identified in the manuscripts. In cases of doubt, Beverley, St John has been used as the default.
St Mary (Carlisle)	Carlisle (when described as a parish)		There are various ancient parishes within Carlisle, which are not always clearly identified in the manuscripts. In cases of doubt, St Mary (Carlisle) has been used as the default.
Normanton on Soar	Normanton	Nottinghamshire	There are two ancient parishes which are easily confused – Normanton on

			Soar and Normanton on Trent. In cases of doubt, Normanton on Soar has been used as the default parish.
Stillingfleet	Stillingfleet	Yorkshire, West Riding	There are additional Stillingfleet parishes, but all these emerge after the nineteenth century and so are not relevant in this project.
Ripon (town and parish)	Ripon	Yorkshire, West Riding	Ripon did not move to Yorkshire, North Riding until 1974.
York, St Peter Le Willows	'St Peter's Walmgate'; 'St Peter'	Yorkshire	In cases where it is unclear which parish of St Peter in York, this is the default parish.
St Peter	St Peter's Cornhill	London
Kirkby Wiske	Kirby Wiske	Yorkshire, North Riding	Kirkby Wiske is the ecclesiastical parish spelling; Kirby Wiske the civic. In this context, it is more appropriate to use the former.
Sutton	Sutton in Holderness	Yorkshire, East Riding	The name of this parish only changed to 'Sutton in Holderness' officially in 1927, although this name is often used in documentation prior to this date.
York, St Martin (Cum Gregory)	St Martin micklegate	Yorkshire
York, St Mary's Bishophill (Senior)	York, St Mary's Bishophill	Yorkshire	There are two ancient parishes of York, St Mary Bishophill which are not always clearly identified in the manuscripts. In cases of doubt, York, St Mary's Bishophill (Senior) has been used as the default.

York, St Mary Bishophill (Junior)	'vico Sante Marie Virginis in Subverbiis'	Yorkshire
Rochdale	Rochdale	Yorkshire, West Riding	Split across different ridings, but we have always linked Rochdale to the West Riding unless there was clear evidence otherwise.
York, St Michael (Spurriergate).	St Michael at Ouse	Yorkshire
York, St Maurice	parochia sancti moricii extra muros Ebor'	Yorkshire
Whalley – part in Yorks W.R. and part in Lancs. Default is W.R.		Whalley in the county of Lancashire	Whalley is partly in Yorkshire, West Riding and partly in Lancashire. The default parish was Yorkshire, West Riding, unless there was clear evidence otherwise.
Filey		Yorkshire, North Riding	Filey parish is in both the East and North Riding, but we have always linked it to Yorkshire, North Riding.
Mitton		Yorkshire, West Riding	Unless a clear indication is given that Lancashire was meant, Mitton was always linked to the West Riding.

Notes on Colleges

The term ‘Bedern’ in the manuscripts can refer either to a street name, for which the standard modern version is The Bedern or to Bedern College, for which the modern version is Bedern College, York. Both are located in the City of York.

Gloucester Hall, Oxford is the standard version, but the manuscripts also sometimes describe this as Worcester College.
