INTRODUCTION

The Reformation changes of the Henrician period both greatly curtailed the number of candidates seeking ordination in the diocese of York and disrupted the registration of ordinations which in the later middle ages had been systematically recorded in the archiepiscopal registers. There are no records at all of ordinations in the diocese for the reigns of Edward VI or Mary I but soon after Elizabeth's accession from 6 July 1561 lists of ordinations reappear in the York archiepiscopal registers. Archbishop Thomas Young normally held two general ordination ceremonies each year: then, after his death in 1568, Richard Barnes, suffragan bishop of Nottingham, introduced the practice of officiating at a number of very small special ordination ceremonies, a procedure which Archbishop Edmund Grindal and his Elizabethan successors all favoured, perhaps because it made the close examination of candidates much easier. No record remains of any ordinations conducted by Edwin Sandys, archbishop between 1576 and 1588. When the registration of ordinations begins again with Archbishop John Piers in 1589 they no longer appear in the archiepiscopal registers but solely in the Institution Act Books. The thirty-first of the Canons of 1604 ordained that following the precedent of the ancient fathers of the church sacred orders should only be conferred on the Sundays following the ember days and so put an end to the frequent special ordinations the archbishops had preferred. From the beginning of his archiepiscopate Toby Matthew obeyed the new canon and reverted to the medieval precedent of normally holding four general ordination ceremonies each year. Matthew's successor, George Montaigne, apparently did not live long enough to conduct any ordinations at York. There are incidental references to ordinations but no ordination lists in the Institution Act Books for the archiepiscopate of Samuel Harsnett. Apart from the ceremony in 1632 when he ordained his own son at Southwell the Act Books indicate that Archbishop Richard Neile seems to have delegated ordinations of York candidates to bishops of neighbouring dioceses. Neile died within days of the first session of Long Parliament. The ensuing Civil War ended the formal registration of ordinations in the diocese, though Restoration Exhibit Books contain some incidental references to ordinations performed by Archbishop John Williams in 1642.

The spelling of Christian names and place names has been modernised; the county or diocese of a candidate's living only appears in the text when specified in the Institution Act Books.

No record of ordinations survives for the archiepiscopate of George Montaigne

Although Inst. AB 6 contains no listings of ordinations by Archbishop Samuel Harsnett, three ceremonies are known to have taken place from subsequent references to ordination at institution.

20 Sept. 1629	Samuel Harsnett	----		[1]
19 Sept. 1630	Samuel Harsnett	----	[4]	[1]
19 Dec. 1630	Samuel Harsnett	----	[1]	[2]

Inst. AB 6 contains only one list of ordinations celebrated by Neile and it seems from the institutions that he relied upon other diocesan bishops or suffragan bishops to carry out ordinations for him. There is one reference to an ordination performed by him in V 1640/Exh Bk.

23 Sept. 1632	Richard Neile	Southwell	6	3
4 Oct. 1640	Richard Neile	----		[1]

Two Restoration Exhibit Books, V 1662-3/Exh. Bk and ER V/Exh. Bk, refer incidentally to ordinations performed by Archbishop John Williams.

3 July 1642	John Williams	----	[1]
28 Aug. 1642	John Williams	----	[1]
25 Sept. 1642	John Williams	----	[1]	[3]
