The MSc. in Marine Environmental Management Program at the University of York really challenges you to think about today's marine conservation problems and how to address those using science-based solutions. We apply taught content during the semester in our summer placement. This internship position provides an invaluable experience and outlook into research and organizations that focus on marine conservation locally and globally. The integrative approach to the course has enabled me to become a contractor for the industry and contribute, right after graduation, to ocean conservation."

Michelle Waterman 0910