Debby Brown 0607

At York University you’re not just another student to make up the numbers, with the University split off into different departments you really feel like part of a small family. The course I studied was Marine and Environmental Management, it was a year long masters and therefore very intense. However even though the course was fast paced you always had the support you needed. The tutors Julie and Callum are a credit to the University; they are always there to call upon for support and guidance. I have graduated from the University and still keep in contact with them via email as they take a genuine interest in my future plans. For anyone considering York University who wants a taught MSc with a course full of exciting modules (even one where you get to travel to Egypt!) a chance to meet new people from all different backgrounds and the support from the whole department, then this is the place to be!