I am very pleased with my Masters course in Marine Environmental Management as it feels a lot more personal than my undergraduate course. You have a lot more contact with your lecturers and feel like you can drop in anytime if you have trouble with something (although an e-mail first is usually best). I enjoyed most of the modules I took this year and provided feedback on those where difficulties arose so they can be improved for the next year. I believe the course has only been running for two years now and so still has some teething difficulties but course meetings every semester and supervisor meetings twice every semester helped to iron them out. On the whole, I would gladly recommend this course to anyone interested in environmental management and needing work experience as part of the course is a summer placement with the organization of your choice.
