Conference Objectives

This conference brings together researchers and those interested in using research evidence to inform the design, delivery and evaluation of services for children and young people with life-limiting conditions and their families. The aims of the conference are

- to offer an overview of current and recently completed UK research within the field;
- to consider the implications of those findings for service design and/or practice;
- to develop delegates' knowledge and understanding of PPI across the research process;
- to provide a forum for connection and exchange between the research and practitioner/provider communities.

By the end of the conference, delegates will:

- have an understanding of current UK research activity concerning children and young people with life-limiting condition and their families;
- have an understanding of the range of research methods and data sources which are relevant to this population;
- understand the role of evidence in service design, service development and practice
- have heard and participated in debates about research evidence and the implications for service design and practice;
- understand the experience of parents' and young adults involved in PPI work and what that means for implementing good PPI across the research process.

Who is the conference for?

- Professionals working with children with life-limiting conditions and/or in the children's/young adult palliative care sector who are interested in getting involved in research or using research evidence
- Research students
- Researchers and academics
