

Why Should we Commemorate the First World War?

The Institute for the Public Understanding of the Past (University of York) and York Castle Museum would like to invite you to an open conversation concerning the legacy of the First World War. The discussion will be led by local community group representatives and University of York postgraduates. The event will offer an interactive opportunity for panellists and audience members to reflect on how we think about the First World War and its legacy today. We will consider how the war has been remembered over the last 100 years, what the importance of commemoration might be today and in the future, and whether we should alter the way we remember the war. The discussion will bring to light some of the hidden histories that are often neglected in First World War narratives, and will give us the opportunity to decide whether commemorations should incorporate these histories.

We hope you will join us at the Castle Museum on 13 June 10 AM-1 PM to discuss
Why Should we Commemorate the First World War?

#ShouldYorkRemember

Why Should we Commemorate the First World War?

Join York Castle Museum and the Institute for the Public Understanding of the Past (IPUP) for an open discussion about the legacy of the First World War.

Saturday 13th June, York Castle Museum, 10am – 1pm, (Free).

Email us at yorkww1debate@gmail.com for more information and for tickets.

#ShouldYorkRemember

UNIVERSITY of York

York Castle Museum

ipup

Institute for the Public Understanding of the Past