

Critical Approaches to Baroque: Initial Bibliography
Professor Helen Hills

NB: All reasonable – and quite considerable -- efforts have been made to ensure that the vast majority of these texts are available to you from one or other of the libraries at York. Some books may only be available at the British Library or other major copyright library. Please use this bibliography as a useful starting point for your research into your selected topics. It is not exhaustive. You should draw on search engines, bibliographical search materials and databases – and, if necessary consult library staff for assistance – in hunting down materials for specific research topics. But this will certainly help get you started.

Death, Violence, Blood

The first chapter of Foucault's Discipline and Punish, 'The body of the condemned', which is suitably gory and also about punishment as spectacle

Michael Cole, 'Cellini's Blood', Art Bulletin, 1999, 215-235.

There is a selection of short extracts from Bataille in a special issue of parallax, 'In Violence,' which might be helpful. parallax 6:2 (2000), pp.83-91.

There are also some violent and visceral essays in his Visions of Excess (maybe 'Sacrificial Mutilation and the Severed Ear of Vincent van Gogh?').

Chapter 6 of Kaja Silverman's Male Subjectivity at the Margins, 'Masochistic Ecstasy and the Ruination of Masculinity in Fassbinder's Cinema', provides a psychoanalytic reading of violence.

The first chapter, 'The Structure of Torture', in Scarry's The Body in Pain might also be worth a look (especially in relation to bearing witness to pain).

Harald Hendrix, 'The Repulsive Body: Images of Torture in Seventeenth- Century Naples', in Florike Egmond, Robert Zwijnenberg (eds.) Bodily Extremities: Preoccupations with the Human Body in Early Modern European Culture, Ashgate, 2003, pp.10-47.
