‘Young Smiles’; an intervention for children with mentally ill parents

Dr. Lina Gega, University of York, Hull York Medical School
9 May 2019
10.00am to 1.00pm (Registration from 9.30)
York Pavilion Hotel, YO10 4PJ

One of Lina’s current research projects is on interventions with children and young people who are affected by, or at risk of, mental health problems. ‘Young Smiles’ is a three year community-based research project to improve the quality of life in children of parents with serious mental ill-health. The research was carried out in partnership with the University of Manchester, the NHS, NSPCC and Barnardo’s.

Lina will present the findings of the research and introduce delegates to the delivery manual that is designed to upskill health and non-health professionals and others to deliver standardised interventions to support mental health.

For subscribing organisations
this is a Children’s Services event.
For others there is a fee of £95
