- Study visits that are linked to your field of study or research
- International internships or volunteering opportunities that are linked to your field of study or research or to your career ambitions
- Attendance at summer schools (outside of university agreements) or foreign language schools
- Attendance at conferences or similar events (students only) – if linked to a further project with specific aims
- Study at foreign archives and libraries
- Senior level departmental/cross-departmental delegations to eligible countries.

2.4 Criteria for success

All Santander applications will be reviewed by a committee who will make awards based on the following criteria:
All applications

- The ambition and creativity of the proposed project
- Links to study, research or career ambitions
- Santander Universities – applications including at least one of these will considered more favourably.

Student applications

- Projects that will encourage enterprise/entrepreneurial skills.

2.5 Application advice:

Volunteering and Internships – Students are encouraged to consider international internships / volunteering projects that link to career ambitions. We are keen to support projects that also benefit the wider University community e.g. by establishing a regular link with the host organisation or by writing a blog about your experiences.

Conferences – Projects that involve academic conference attendance are more likely to be funded if they can also demonstrate a wider ambition and benefit to the University of York e.g. combining a conference with a visit to a local university to liaise with research staff regarding recruitment or collaborative research work.

Research Visits – Applicants are warmly welcome to submit applications for research visits. We would encourage applicants to consider ways of giving a benefit to the wider University community e.g. through donating images to the York Digital Library, by giving a seminar or talk on return or by visiting a local university to build new academic connections.
