

Livia

University of Copenhagen, Denmark

My year abroad has changed me in many ways. Living in an international and welcoming city, I have learned to love a new culture with its very unique and sometimes strange traditions. It is incredibly precious to know that you are able to build an entire life for yourself in a city where you, initially, have absolutely no contacts.

For every problem in my way I managed to find a solution and while it can be sometimes frustrating to live in a country where you don't speak the language, this year, most of all, gave me a few months of absolute and pure happiness that I will never forget.

